

NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

Scott F. Aikin is Senior Lecturer at the Philosophy Department of Vanderbilt University. His areas of interest are: epistemology, informal logic, argumentation, pragmatism, and ancient philosophy. His books include: Epistemology and the Regress Problem (2011, reviewed in this issue of Logos & Episteme), Reasonable Atheism (2011, with Robert B. Talisse), and Pragmatism: A Guide for the Perplexed (2008, with Robert B. Talisse). Contact: scott.f.aikin@vanderbilt.edu.

Guy Axtell is Assistant Professor in the Philosophy and Religious Studies Department, Radford University. His research areas are epistemology and analytic and comparative philosophy of religion. His most recent publications include: “Three Independent Factors in Epistemology” (Contemporary Pragmatism, 2010, with Phillip Olson), “Character-Trait Ascription in Ethics and Epistemology” (Metaphilosophy, 2010), and “Virtue Theoretic Responses to Skepticism” (Oxford Handbook of Epistemology, John Greco, ed., 2009). Contact: gsaxtell@radford.edu.

Cătălin Bobb has a Ph.D. in philosophy at Babeş Bolyai University, Romania. His main interests are hermeneutics, phenomenology and philosophy of religion. He is currently working as a postdoctoral fellow at the Romanian Academy, in a project regarding the problem of explication and understanding. Contact: catalinbobb@yahoo.com.

Michael Harbour is a Ph.D. candidate in the Department of Philosophy at Vanderbilt University with a thesis on Freedom as Anti-Domination. His research focuses on social and political philosophy. He is the author of “Nagel on Public Education and Intelligent Design” (Journal of Philosophical Research, 2010, with Scott F. Aikin and Robert B. Talisse) and “The Ethics of Inquiry and Engagement: The Case of Science in Public” (Public Affairs Quarterly, 2010, with Scott F. Aikin).

Jimmy Alfonso Licon is M.A. Candidate in Philosophy, Department of Philosophy, San Francisco State University. His main areas of philosophical interest are: epistemology (responses to skepticism, epistemic theories of justification, introspective skepticism, and moral epistemology), metaphysics and philosophical methodology. Contact: jalicon@mail.sfsu.edu

Ned Markosian is Professor in the Department of Philosophy at Western Washington University. His area of specialization is metaphysics and his areas of competence include epistemology, ethics, logic, modern philosophy, ancient philosophy, philosophy of language, philosophy of religion, philosophy of science. He is the author of An Introduction to Metaphysics (with John W. Carroll, 2010). Contact: ned.markosian@wwu.edu

Jonathan Matheson is Assistant Professor of Philosophy at the University of North Florida. His areas of specialization are epistemology and ethics, and his areas of competence are metaphysics, philosophy of language, and philosophy of religion. His most recent work includes: "Epistemological Considerations Concerning Skeptical Theism: A Response to Dougherty" (Faith and Philosophy, forthcoming), "Bergmann's Dilemma: Exit Strategies for Internalists" (Philosophical Studies, 2011, with Jason Rogers), "Conciliatory Views of Disagreement and Higher-Order Evidence" (Episteme: A Journal of Social Philosophy, 2009). Contact: j.matheson@unf.edu

Christian Möckel is Professor of Philosophy at Humboldt University (Berlin) and University of Hamburg. His academic interests include Ernst Cassirer's work, Husserl's phenomenology, political philosophy of the 17th century and the relationship between Life and Reason in its multiple philosophical aspects. His books include Das Urphänomen des Leben. Der Lebensbegriff Ernst Cassirers (2005), Phänomenologie. Probleme, Bezüge, Interpretationen (2003), and Einführung in die transzendente Phänomenologie (1998). Contact: MoeckelC@Philosophie.hu-berlin.de

Jonathan Neufeld is Assistant Professor of Philosophy at the College of Charleston. His research interests are in: philosophy of music, aesthetics, political philosophy, and philosophy of law. He is particularly interested in problems surrounding performance and interpretation. He is currently working on two books: Music in Public: How Performance Shapes Democracy (forthcoming 2011), and Listeners, Critics, and Judges (in preparation). Contact: neufeldja@cofc.edu

Robert B. Talisse is Professor of Philosophy and Political Science and Director of Graduate Studies in Philosophy at Vanderbilt University. He is also editor of Public Affairs Quarterly. His area of specialization is contemporary political philosophy. He is the author of: Reasonable Atheism (2011, with Scott Aikin), Democracy and Moral Conflict (2009), Pragmatism: A Guide for the Perplexed (2008, with Scott Aikin), A Pragmatist Philosophy of Democracy (2007), and Democracy After Liberalism (2005). Contact: robert.talisse@vanderbilt.edu.

Hamid Vahid is Professor of Philosophy and the Head of the Analytic Philosophy Faculty at the Institute for Fundamental Sciences in Tehran, Iran. He is the author of Epistemic Justification and the Skeptical Challenge (2005) and The Epistemology of Belief (2008). His list of articles include: "Rationalizing Beliefs: Evidential vs. Pragmatic Reasons" (Synthese, forthcoming), "The Concept of Entitlement and its Epistemic Relevance" (Pacific Philosophical Quarterly, 2011), and "Alston on Belief and Acceptance in Religious Faith" (Heythrop Journal, 2009). Contact: vahid@ipm.ir.

Mark Owen Webb is Associated Professor in the Department of Philosophy, Texas Tech University. His areas of specialization are epistemology and philosophy of religion and his areas of competence are Asian philosophy, Buddhism and feminism. He is currently working on a book entitled A Comparative Doxastic-Practice Epistemology of Religious Experience (under contract with Springer Press). He also edited, with Heidi Grasswick, Feminist Epistemology as Social Epistemology (a special issue of Social Epistemology 16, 2002). Contact: Mark.Webb@ttu.edu.