

NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

Fred Adams is Professor of Cognitive Science & Philosophy and Chair of the Department of Linguistics & Cognitive Science at the University of Delaware. His main areas of interest include: epistemology, cognitive science, philosophy of mind, ethics. He is the author of: The Bounds of Cognition (2008 – with Kenneth Aizawa), Ethical Issues in the Life Sciences (2007) and Ethical Issues for the 21 st Century (2005). Contact: fa@udel.edu.

Scott F. Aikin is Senior Lecturer at the Philosophy Department of Vanderbilt University. His areas of interest are: epistemology, informal logic, argumentation, and pragmatism. His books include: Epistemology and the Regress Problem (2010), Reasonable Atheism (forthcoming 2011) and Pragmatism: A Guide for the Perplexed (2008) – both with Robert B. Talisse. Contact: scott.f.aikin@vanderbilt.edu.

John Barker is Associate Professor of Philosophy at the University of Illinois at Springfield, and Chair of the Philosophy Department. He is specialized in philosophical logic, philosophy of language, philosophy of mind and philosophy of science. His most recent published philosophical writings are “Disquotation, Conditionals, and the Liar” and “Undeniably Paradoxical” (both in Polish Journal of Philosophy). Contact: jbark3@uis.edu.

Vihren Bouzov is Associate Professor at the Faculty of Philosophy, University “St. Cyril and St. Methodius,” Bulgaria. His main interests are in: philosophy of science, logic of social sciences, philosophy of law. He is the author of: The World of Norms (2006), and Logic of Decisions or How to be Effective in Decision Making (2007), Brief Notes on Philosophy (2008) – in Bulgarian. Contact: v.bouzov@gmail.com.

James C. Cargile is Professor at the Department of Philosophy, University of Virginia and Director of the Colloquium Series. His areas of specialization are: metaphysics, philosophical logic, epistemology, ethics. He is the author of many articles, studies and chapters in books, such as: “The Fallacy of Epistemicism” (Oxford Studies in Epistemology, 2005), and “On Russell's Argument against Resemblance Nominalism” (Australasian Journal of Philosophy, 2003). Contact: jc7y@virginia.edu.

Murray Clarke is a Professor of Philosophy at Concordia University, Montreal and Adjunct Research Professor at Carleton University's Institute of Cognitive Science. He works in cognitive science, philosophy of mind, and naturalized epistemology, and is the author of Reconstructing Reason and Representation (2004). He is currently working on a book defending an evolutionary account of informational atomism that combines a representational theory of mind with a computational account of cognition. Contact: murc@alcor.concordia.ca.

Sorin Costreie is Lecturer in the Department of Theoretical Philosophy at the University of Bucharest (UB). He is also here the Head of the Quality Management Department. His main philosophical interests are in the philosophy of mathematics and the philosophy of language. He published various papers related to these issues in collective volumes and specialized journals. He is also one of the co-organizers at UB of the Bucharest colloquium in Analytic Philosophy and the Evenings with Science. Contact: s.cos3e@yahoo.ca.

Theodore Everett is Professor of Philosophy at University SUNY Geneseo. His philosophical interests are in epistemology, metaphysics, logic, and ethics. He is the author of many studies and articles, including “Antiskeptical Conditionals” (Philosophy and Phenomenological Research, 2006), and “Analyticity Without Synonymy in Simple Comparative Logic” (Synthese, 2002), and “The Rationality of Science and the Rationality of Faith” (Journal of Philosophy, 2001). Contact: everett@geneseo.edu.

Carl Allen Ginet is Professor Emeritus at Sage School of Philosophy, Cornell University, Ithaca, New York. His work is primarily in action theory, moral responsibility, free will, and epistemology, but his interests include also metaphysics, philosophy of mind, and philosophy of language. Two of his most important contributions to philosophy are the books: Knowledge, Perception, and Memory (1975) and On Action (1990). Contact: cag2@cornell.edu.

Steven Hales is Professor at the Department of Philosophy, Bloomsburg University. His areas of specialization include epistemology and metaphysics. He is the author of Relativism and the Foundations of Philosophy (2006), Nietzsche's Perspectivism (2000 – with Rex Welshon), and editor of many volumes such as: A Companion to Relativism (forthcoming – 2011) an Analytic Philosophy: Classic Readings (2001). Contact: hales@bloomu.edu.

Michael Harbour is a Ph.D. candidate in the Department of Philosophy at Vanderbilt University with a thesis on Freedom as Anti-Domination. His research focuses on social and political philosophy. He is the author of: “Nagel on Public Education and Intelligent Design” (Journal of Philosophical Research, 2010 – with Scott F. Aikin and Robert B. Talisse) and “The Ethics of Inquiry and Engagement: The Case of Science in Public” (Public Affairs Quarterly, 2010 – with Scott F. Aikin).

Lauren J. Leydon-Hardy is Teaching Assistant at Brandeis University, Massachusetts. Her area of specialization is epistemology, and other areas of competence are: philosophy of logic, philosophy of language and metaethics. She is currently working, at Brandeis University, on her MA thesis: Justifying Falsehoods: False Justifiers and the Structure of Justification. Contact: ljleydon@brandeis.edu.

Jonathan Neufeld is Assistant Professor of Philosophy and European Studies at Vanderbilt University. His research interests are in: philosophy of music, aesthetics, political philosophy, and philosophy of law. He is particularly interested in problems surrounding performance and interpretation. He is currently working on two books: Music in Public: How Performance Shapes Democracy (forthcoming 2011), and Listeners, Critics, and Judges (in preparation). Contact: jonathan.a.neufeld@vanderbilt.edu.

Robert B. Talisse is Professor of Philosophy and Political Science and Director of Graduate Studies in Philosophy at Vanderbilt University, and editor of Public Affairs Quarterly. His area of specialization is contemporary political philosophy. His most recent work engages issues at the intersection of political theory and epistemology. He is the author of: Reasonable Atheism (with Scott Aikin, forthcoming), Democracy and Moral Conflict (2009), Pragmatism: A Guide for the Perplexed (with Scott Aikin, 2008), A Pragmatist Philosophy of Democracy (2007), and Democracy After Liberalism (2005). He also edited many books on pragmatism, logic, political problems, American philosophy. Contact: robert.talisse@vanderbilt.edu.