

NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

Robert Albin is Senior Lecturer in Philosophy and Ethics at The Department of Liberal Arts at Sapir College, Israel. His Research interests are in the fields of philosophy of culture and applied ethics, with a special interest in media ethics. He is the author of A Chronicle of the Decline of Rationality: Ethics in the Practice of Journalism (2004, in Hebrew). His publications include: “Journalists as Agents of Cultural Change: From Rationality Back to Nature” (International Journal of Applied Philosophy, 2007), “Modern Technology as a Denaturalizing Force” (Poiesis and Praxis, 2007), and “Moral Dilemmas in Business Ethics: From Decision Procedures to Edifying Perspectives” (Journal of Business Ethics, 2006, with Yotam Lurie). Contact: albin@sapir.ac.il.

George Bodi, PhD, is scientific researcher for the Romanian Academy – Iași Branch, Institute of Archaeology. He is currently beneficiary of a post-doctoral scholarship within The Knowledge Based Society project developed by the Romanian Academy, with the individual research project The Constitution of Knowledge in the Archaeology of Romanian Prehistory. His main research interests are situated within the field of landscape archaeology and archaeological theory. Contact: georgebodi@gmail.com.

Bogdan Boghițoi is a postdoctoral researcher at the Faculty of Philosophy of the University of Bucharest. His interests lie chiefly in the epistemological problems raised by the various theories of psychology and cognitive science. He is the author of Mintea familiară (The Familiar Mind) (Editura Trei, 2010), which aims at clarifying the structure and scientific credentials of folk psychology. Contact: bogdan.boghitoi@gmail.com.

Anthony Booth is lecturer in philosophy at the University of Sussex, United Kingdom. His research interests are in the philosophy of mind, ethics, and epistemology more generally, and on the ethics of belief more specifically. Contact: A.R.Booth@sussex.ac.uk.

Ben Bronner recently received his BA in philosophy and neuroscience from Oberlin College. His main interests are in the philosophy of mind and normative and applied ethics. He is the co-author of “Visual Prominence and Representationalism” (with Todd Ganson, Philosophical Studies, forthcoming) and “Burge’s Defense of Perceptual Content” (with Todd Ganson and Alex Kerr, Philosophy and Phenomenological Research, forthcoming). Contact: benj.bronner@gmail.com.

Jasper Doomen is a lecturer in law at Leiden University and has previously been active in the same capacity at Utrecht University. He holds an M.A. in Philosophy (Leiden University, 2003) and a J.D. (Utrecht University, 2005). His publications are mainly in the field of philosophy and law. Contact: jasperdoomen@yahoo.com.

Dale Jacquette is ordentlicher Professor für Philosophie, Abteilung Logik und theoretische Philosophie (Senior Professorial Chair in Logic and Theoretical Philosophy), at Universität Bern, Switzerland. He is the author of numerous articles on logic, metaphysics, philosophy of mind, and aesthetics, and has recently published Philosophy of Mind: The Metaphysics of Consciousness (Continuum, 2009), Ontology (McGill-Queen's University Press, 2002), David Hume's Critique of Infinity (Brill, 2000), and Wittgenstein's Thought in Transition (Purdue University Press, 1998). He has edited the Blackwell Companion to Philosophical Logic (2005), Cambridge Companion to Brentano (2004), and for North-Holland (Elsevier) the volume on Philosophy of Logic (2007) in the Handbook of the Philosophy of Science series. Contact: dale.jacquette@philo.unibe.ch.

Jimmy Alfonso Licon recently took his MA in Philosophy from San Francisco State University. He plans to apply to philosophy doctoral programs in the Fall. His philosophical interests are various issues in metaphysics and epistemology, and applied ethics. He published in Logos & Episteme "No Suicide for Presentists: A Response to Hales" and "Still No Suicide for Presentists: Why Hales' Response Fails." Contact: jimmylicon01@gmail.com.

Clayton Littlejohn is Lecturer with the Department of Philosophy at King's College London. His main areas of research are in epistemology and ethical theory. He is the author of Justification and the Truth-Connection (Cambridge University Press, 2012), a monograph on the internalism-externalism debate in epistemology. Currently, he is co-editing Epistemic Norms (Oxford University, forthcoming) with John Turri and writing This is Epistemology (Wiley-Blackwell, forthcoming), an introduction to epistemology. Contact: clayton.littlejohn@kcl.ac.uk.

Nicolás Lo Guercio is a graduate student in the University of Buenos Aires and a scholar in the National Center for Research in Science and Technology, Argentina. He is adjunct in Logic in the UNQui (National University of Quilmes), Argentina. His main areas of research include epistemology (peer disagreement and epistemology of testimony) and philosophy of language (truth-relativism, the semantics/pragmatics boundary). He is part of the research project "Contemporary debates on epistemology of testimony" (UBACyT, ANCyT and SADF). Contact: nicolasloguercio@gmail.com.

Rik Peels is a post-doctoral researcher at the VU University Amsterdam, the Netherlands. His research interests are in ethics, epistemology, philosophy of religion, and philosophical theology. His most recent publications are "Tracing Culpable Ignorance" (Logos & Episteme, 2011), "Sin and Human Cognition of God" (Scottish Journal of Theology, 2011), and "Ignorance Is Lack of True Belief: A Rejoinder to Le Morvan" (Philosophia, 2011). Contact: mail@rikpeels.nl.

Noah Roderick is an Assistant Professor of English at Lourdes University in Sylvania, Ohio, United States. His teaching and research areas include the rhetoric of science, social epistemology, and minority language and literacy studies. His most recent publications include "Analogize This! The Politics of Scale and the Problems of Substance in Complexity-Based Composition," published in Composition Forum (Spring 2012) and "Beyond the Common Denominator: Exposing Semiotic (Dis)Unity in Mathematics Textbooks" (co-written with Travis Olson), which appeared in The New Politics of the Textbook: A Project of Critical Examination and Resistance (Sense Publishers: 2012). Contact: nroderic@lourdes.edu.

Cristinel Ungureanu, PhD in philosophy at "Alexandru I. Cuza" University of Iași in 2010, is an independent researcher. His main philosophical interests are in the philosophy of mind and philosophy of psychology. He publishes on these issues in various philosophical journals and collective volumes. He has been awarded several research scholarships and fellowships from Centrul National de Burse, DAAD, and "Alexandru I. Cuza" University of Iași. Contact: c_ungureanu2003@yahoo.com.