

NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

Patrick Bondy is a post-doctoral fellow at Cornell University. His main areas of research are in epistemology and argumentation theory. His recent publications include “Intensionality and Epistemic Justification” (Philosophia, 2013) and “Truth and Argument Evaluation” (Informal Logic, 2010). Contact: patrbondy@gmail.com.

William Brant is a course provider for PDHonline.org in the field of Engineering Ethics. Brant is a postdoctoral researcher at Sofia University St. Kliment Ohridski and an adjunct professor at Texas State University and the University of Maryland University College within the philosophy and distance education departments. Brant’s interests include metaphysics, interdisciplinary studies, including cognitive science and criminal justice, and ethics concerning science and technology. His most recent publications include Critique of Sarcastic Reason: The Epistemology of the Cognitive Neurological Ability Called “Theory of Mind” and Deceptive Reasoning (SVH, 2012) and Mental Imagery and Creativity: Cognition, Observation, and Realization (AV, 2013). Contact: wb19@txstate.edu.

Jimmy Alfonso Licon is a philosophy doctoral student at the University of Maryland, College Park. His main areas of research are located at the intersection of philosophy of mind and epistemology, and also applied ethics; he does some work in meta-philosophy and philosophy of religion. He has been published in a wide variety of journals such as Prolegomena, Think, Balkan Journal of Philosophy, and Philosophia. Contact: jimmylicon01@gmail.com.

Clayton Littlejohn is Lecturer with the Department of Philosophy at King’s College London. His current research focuses primarily on knowledge-first epistemology. He is the author of Justification and the Truth-Connection (Cambridge University Press, 2012) and This is Epistemology (Wiley-Blackwell, forthcoming), an introduction to epistemology. Contact: clayton.littlejohn@kcl.ac.uk.

Nicolás Lo Guercio is a graduate student in the University of Buenos Aires and a scholar in the National Center for Research in Science and Technology, Argentina.

Logos & Episteme

He is adjunct in Logic in the UNQui (National University of Quilmes), Argentina. His main areas of research include epistemology (peer disagreement and epistemology of testimony) and philosophy of language (truth-relativism, the semantics/pragmatics boundary). He is part of the research project "Contemporary debates on epistemology of testimony." His most recent publications include "Philosophical Peer Disagreement (Logos & Episteme, 2012)" and "Modulation of Evaluative Predicates" (Análisis Filosófico, forthcoming, in Spanish). Contact: nicolasloguercio@gmail.com.

Caroline Alexandra Mathieu is a PhD candidate at the University of Laval, Canada. Her main areas of research is in management and have a special interest in epistemology. Her most recent publications include "Application of the Job Demands-Resources Model to Family Physicians and their Intent to leave: Proposal of a New Model" (European Journal of Business Research), and "What if Cronbach was right?" (European Journal of Management). Contact: mathieu_caroline@hotmail.com.

Peter Murphy is an Associate Professor of Philosophy at University of Indianapolis. His main areas of research are epistemology and applied ethics. His recent publications include "The Defect in Effective Skeptical Scenarios" (International Journal for the Study of Skepticism, forthcoming). Contact: murphyp@uindy.edu.

Anguel S. Stefanov is professor and Head of department "Ontological and Epistemological Researches" in the Institute for the Study of Societies and Knowledge, Bulgarian Academy of Sciences. His publications include books and papers some of which published by Kluwer Academic Publishers (Boston Studies in the Philosophy of Science, Vol. 236, 2003, 169-185), Pergamon Press, Springer (Journal for General Philosophy of Science, Vol. 43, Issue 1, 2012, 67-76), Peter Lang, Cambridge Scholars Publishing, University Press of America, Ontos Verlag. Contact: angstefanov@abv.bg.