

NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

Adrian Costache is lecturer in the Department of Didactics of the Human Sciences, “Babeş-Bolyai” University, Cluj-Napoca. He holds a PhD from “Babeş-Bolyai” University for a thesis entitled Between Hermeneutics and Deconstruction. A Critical Approach to the Question of Understanding (defended in 2010). His area of specialization include philosophical hermeneutics and deconstruction and his current fields of research are the philosophy of history, the neo-metaphysics of Gilles Deleuze, and the didactics of the human sciences. Contact: johnadriancostache@gmail.com.

Simon D'Alfonso is a recent doctoral graduate from the University of Melbourne. His main areas of research are logic, epistemology and the philosophy of information and computation. His most recent publication is "The Logic of Knowledge and the Flow of Information" (Minds and Machines, 2013). Web: theinformationalturn.net. Contact: me@simondalfonso.id.au.

Eugen Huzum, editor-in-chief of Logos & Episteme, is Senior Researcher III at "Gh. Zane" Institute for Economic and Social Research, Romanian Academy, Iasi Branch. His main research interests are in political philosophy, epistemology, metaphilosophy, and the intersections between these three domains of philosophical reflection. His most recent publication in english is "Is the Pursuit of Truth the Primary Task of a Political Philosopher?" (European Journal of Science and Theology, 2012). Web: <https://ices-ro.academia.edu/EugenHuzum>. Contact: eugenh76@yahoo.com.

Ciprian Jeler is a researcher at the “Interdisciplinary Research Department – Human and Social Sciences” of the “Al. I. Cuza” University of Iaşi, Romania. His main areas of research are philosophy of biology and contemporary French philosophy. His recent publications include “Do Elliott Sober’s Arguments for Group Selection Really Account for the Causal Nature of Natural Selection?” (Filozofia, 2013) and “‘Résister à la résistance:’ l’implacable et la ressource” (Annales bergsoniennes VI, eds. Shin Abiko, Arnaud François, and Camille Riquier, PUF, Paris, 2013). Contact: ciprianjeler@yahoo.com.

Thomas Kroedel is a lecturer in philosophy at the Humboldt University of Berlin. His main areas of research are epistemology, metaphysics, and philosophy of mind. His recent papers include “The Permissibility Solution to the Lottery Paradox – Reply to Littlejohn” (Logos & Episteme, 2013), “Counterfactuals and the Epistemology of Modality” (Philosophers’ Imprint, 2012), “The Lottery Paradox, Epistemic Justification and Permissibility” (Analysis, 2012), and “Dualist Mental Causation and the Exclusion Problem” (Noûs, forthcoming). Contact: thomas.kroedel@hu-berlin.de.

Andrew McFarland is a doctoral candidate in philosophy at the University of Kansas, and a Chateaubriand Fellow at the IHPST (Paris 1 - Panthéon-Sorbonne). His main areas of interest are in metaphysics, philosophy of language, and philosophy of biology. Contact: andrewlmcfarland@gmail.com

Robin McKenna is a postdoctoral research fellow at the University of Geneva. His main areas of research are in epistemology and philosophy of language, but he also has substantial interests in metaethics and philosophical methodology. His recent publications include "Disagreeing about 'ought'" (forthcoming in Ethics), "Normative scorekeeping" (forthcoming in Synthese) and "'Knowledge' ascriptions, social roles and semantics" (published in Episteme, 10, 4, 2013). Contact: rbnmckenna@gmail.com or robin.mckenna@unige.ch.

Teodor Negru is a PhD candidate at Radboud University Nijmegen, The Netherlands. His main areas of research in cognitive science and philosophy of mind are self, free will, agency and mental causation. He has been published in a wide variety of journals such as Trans/form/ação, Filosofia Unisinos, European Journal of Science and Theology, Cultura: International Journal of Philosophy of Culture and Axiology. Contact: theonegru@yahoo.com.

Cătălina-Daniela Răducu is Ph. D. Researcher at the Institute of Economic and Social Research “Gheorghe Zane” of the Romanian Academy. She is also executive editor of Logos & Episteme. Her main fields of interest are social and political philosophy (especially gender and feminism), epistemology and analytic philosophy. She is the author of “Ontological Pluralism” and the Idea of “Commonsense” in the Perspective of the Analytic Philosophy (Lumen, 2007, in Romanian). Contact: cathy_raducu2001@yahoo.com.