

NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

Fred Adams is Professor of Linguistics and Cognitive Science and Professor of Philosophy at the University of Delaware. He has published well over 100 articles and chapters on cognitive science, epistemology, philosophy of language, philosophy of action, and related topics. He is also co-author of The Bounds of Cognition (Wiley-Blackwell, 2008, with Ken Aizawa) and of An Introduction to the Philosophy of Psychology (Cambridge University Press, 2015, with Daniel Weiskopf. Contact: fa@udel.edu.

Philip Atkins is currently a Visiting Assistant Professor of Philosophy at Temple University. He received his doctorate in 2013 from the University of California, Santa Barbara. His research interests include the philosophy of language, epistemology, and metaphysics. Some of his recent publications include “A Russellian Account of Suspended Judgment” (Synthese) and “A Pragmatic Solution to Ostertag’s Puzzle” (Philosophical Studies). He is also the coauthor of “Essential Versus Accidental Properties” (Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy, with Teresa Robertson). Contact: philip.atkins@temple.edu.

John A. Barker is Professor Emeritus of Philosophy at Southern Illinois University Edwardsville. He is the author of numerous articles in the areas of epistemology, philosophy of language, logic, philosophy of mind, and philosophy of science. He is also the author of a book, A Formal Analysis of Conditionals (Southern Illinois University Monographs, 1969) and of a software application, ProtoThinker: A Model of the Mind (Wadsworth, 1998 and ProtoThinker.com, 2016). Contact: johnabarker1@cs.com.

Constantin C. Brîncuș is a PhD candidate at the Faculty of Philosophy, University of Bucharest. His main research interests include modern logic, philosophical logic, philosophy of logic, philosophy of language and epistemology. His most recent articles include “Inferring to the Best Explanation of First-Order Logical Truths” (forthcoming in The Romanian Journal of Analytic Philosophy, 2016), “The Epistemic Significance of Valid Inference – A Model-Theoretic Approach,” in Meaning and Truth, ed. Sorin Costreie and Mircea Dumitru (Bucharest: Pro Universitaria Publishing House, 2015). “A Carnapian Approach to Counterexamples to Modus Ponens,” Romanian Journal of Analytic Philosophy (2013, with Iulian D. Toader). Contact: c.brincus@yahoo.com.

Lajos Brons is an adjunct professor of philosophy at Lakeland University, Japan

Campus, and a researcher at the philosophy department of Nihon University, both in Tokyo, Japan. His research is divided over two broad areas: one is in the overlap of ethics and social/political philosophy; the other is in the intersection of philosophy of language, metaphysics, and epistemology. His recent publications include “Putnam and Davidson on Coherence, Truth, and Justification” (The Science of Mind, 2016), “Othering, an Analysis” (Transcience, 2015), “Wang Chong, Truth, and Quasi-Pluralism” (Comparative Philosophy, 2015), and “Meaning and Reality: a Cross-Traditional Encounter” (Mou & Tieszen, Constructive Engagement of Analytic and Continental Approaches in Philosophy, 2013). Contact: mail@lajosbrons.net.

Murray Clarke is Professor in the Department of Philosophy at Concordia University in Montreal, Quebec. His research interests span contemporary epistemology, cognitive science and philosophy of science. He is the author of Reconstructing Reason and Representation (MIT, 2004). He has published numerous articles including “Resurrecting the Tracking Theories” (Australasian Journal of Philosophy, 2005), “Concepts, Intuitions and Epistemic Norms” (Logos & Episteme. An International Journal of Epistemology, 2010), and “Critical Notice: Jose Zalabardo’s Scepticism and Reliable Belief” (Teorema, 2014). Contact: Murray.Clarke@concordia.ca.

Arnold Cusmariu is a philosopher and a working sculptor. He has published articles on topics in metaphysics, epistemology, the philosophy of mathematics, the philosophy of mind and aesthetics – available at www.Academia.edu. His World Trade Center Memorial Competition entry can be viewed at <http://www.wtcsitememorial.org/ent/entI=446704.html>. Also a screenwriter, his scripts Muybridge, Fancy Free, and Light Becomes Her are available at www.zoetrope.com. Contact: bravo323@gmail.com.

Mona Simion is a Doctoral Researcher at the Arché Research Centre, University of St. Andrews and the KU Leuven Epistemology Group. Her research focuses mainly on epistemology and ethics, but it also touches on issues in the philosophy of language. She has worked on topics like epistemic norms, the value of knowledge, perceptual and testimonial entitlement, epistemic contextualism, pragmatic encroachment, the transitivity of value ordering, distributive justice, meta-decision theory, criticism and blame. She is currently developing a function-first integrated account of epistemic norms for practical reasoning, assertion and belief. On this account, the epistemic norms at stake are taken to drop out of the respective epistemic functions. Contact: mis2@st-andrews.ac.uk.

Pierre Uzan is a member of SPHERE laboratory of History and Philosophy of Science, University Paris-Diderot/CNRS. His main areas of research are in Philosophy of Quantum Mechanics, Quantum Logic and Philosophy of Mind. He has suggested an explanation of the nature of psychophysical correlations in terms of (generalized) entanglement, without appealing to a concept of causality and without identifying mind and brain. His recent publications include Conscience et physique quantique (Vrin, Paris) and several articles bearing on the quantum-like modelling of the psychosomatic unity of the individual, like “On the nature of psychophysical correlations” (Mind and Matter, 2014). Contact: pierre.uzan@paris7.jussieu.fr.

Raphael van Riel is associate professor at the University of Duisburg-Essen (Germany) and principal investigator in the research group „A Study in Explanatory Power.” His research mainly focuses on theories of explanation. He has published one book (The Concept of Reduction, Springer, 2014), he has co-authored the entry “Scientific Reduction” in the Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy (together with Robert N. Van Gulick), and he has published numerous papers and chapters on various topics, mainly in theoretical philosophy. Contact: Raphael.vanRiel@uni-due.de.

Kevin Wallbridge is a PhD candidate at the University of Edinburgh. His primary interests are in epistemology, although his research also touches upon issues in the philosophy of mind, metaphysics, and language. His PhD thesis, Counterfactual Epistemology: in Defence of Sensitivity, defends the claim that knowledge requires sensitive belief and examines how this claim interacts with anti-luck epistemology, virtue epistemology, hinge-epistemology, and contextualism. Contact: k.j.wallbridge@gmail.com.

John N. Williams is an associate professor in philosophy in the School of Social Sciences at Singapore Management University. His research interests include paradoxes, epistemology and applied ethics. He has published extensively on Moore’s Paradox. His most recent articles include: “Still a New Problem for Defeasibility: A Rejoinder to Borges” (Logos & Episteme. An International Journal of Epistemology, 2016), “The Backward Clock, Truth-Tracking, and Safety” (with Neil Sinhababu, Journal of Philosophy, 2015), “Not Knowing You Know: A New Objection to the Defeasibility Theory of Knowledge” (Analysis, 2015), “Moore’s Paradox in Speech: A Critical Survey” (Philosophy Compass, 2015), and “Moore’s Paradox in Thought: A Critical Survey” (Philosophy Compass, 2015). Contact: johnwilliams@smu.edu.