

NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

Fred Adams is Professor of Linguistics & Cognitive Science and Professor of Philosophy at the University of Delaware. He has published well over 100 articles and chapters on cognitive science, epistemology, philosophy of language, philosophy of action, and related topics. He is also co-author of The Bounds of Cognition (Wiley-Blackwell, 2008, with Ken Aizawa) and of An Introduction to the Philosophy of Psychology (Cambridge University Press, 2015, with Daniel Weiskopf. Contact: fa@udel.edu.

Guy Axtell is a Professor of Philosophy, and a Faculty Fellow of the Radford University Honors Academy. His main teaching interests are in epistemology and metaphysics, philosophy of science, “STS” or science, technology and society studies, and philosophy of religion. His most recent publications include: “William James on Pragmatism and Religion,” and “The Emotions in James’ Principles of Psychology” (in William James, Moral Philosophy, and the Ethical Life: The Cries of the Wounded, ed. Jacob Goodson, Lexington Books, 2016), Objectivity (Polity Press, 2015), and “Navigating the Dialectics of Objectivity” (in The Future of Social Epistemology: A Collective Vision, ed. James Collier, Rowman & Littlefield, 2015). Contact: gsaxtell@radford.edu.

John A. Barker is Professor Emeritus of Philosophy at Southern Illinois University Edwardsville. He is the author of numerous articles in the areas of epistemology, philosophy of language, logic, philosophy of mind, and philosophy of science. He is also the author of a book, A Formal Analysis of Conditionals (Southern Illinois University Monographs, 1969) and of a software application, ProtoThinker: A Model of the Mind (Wadsworth, 1998 and ProtoThinker.com, 2016). Contact: johnabarker1@cs.com.

Umut Baysan is a postdoctoral research associate in Philosophy at the University of Glasgow. His works mainly in metaphysics and philosophy of mind, and has research interests in epistemology and philosophy of science. His publications include “Realization Relations in Metaphysics” (Minds and Machines, 2015), “An Argument for Power Inheritance” (Philosophical Quarterly, 2016), and book reviews in Mind and Philosophical Quarterly. He is also the author of the “Realization” entry in Oxford Bibliographies in Philosophy. Contact: emin.baysan@glasgow.ac.uk.

John Biro teaches at the University of Florida. His interests are in the philosophy of language, the philosophy of mind, epistemology, metaphysics and the history of philosophy, especially in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. He has published papers in these areas in journals such as The Monist, Australasian Journal of Philosophy, Philosophy and Phenomenological Research, Philosophical Studies, History of Philosophy Quarterly, The Review of Metaphysics and Hume Studies. He is also co-editor of two collections of papers on Spinoza and one on Frege. Contact: jbiro@ufl.edu.

Olga Ramirez Calle is Assistant Professor of Philosophy at the University of Saint Louis Missouri, Campus Madrid. She obtained her PhD (Dr. Phil) at the J.W. Goethe University of Frankfurt at Main. Her research interests are principally concerned with foundational questions and lie at the crossroads between philosophy of language, epistemology and metaphysics. She has worked on Crispin Wright’s conception of truth as superassertibility, metaethics (specifically conceptual genealogy) and has defended the existence of ‘functionally structured concepts’ and the expansion of Russell’s quantified existential analysis to functions to give account of them. She has also written a study on the grounds of logical inference, which is ongoing work. Contact: olgaramirezcallegmail.com.

Murray Clarke is Professor in the Department of Philosophy at Concordia University in Montreal, Quebec. His research interests span contemporary epistemology, cognitive science and philosophy of science. He is the author of Reconstructing Reason and Representation (MIT, 2004). He has published numerous articles including “Resurrecting the Tracking Theories” (Australasian Journal of Philosophy, 2005), “Concepts, Intuitions and Epistemic Norms” (Logos & Episteme, 2010), and “Critical Notice: Jose Zalabardo’s Scepticism and Reliable Belief” (Teorema, 2014). Contact: Murray.Clarke@concordia.ca.

Jonathan L. Kvanvig is Professor of Philosophy at Washington University in St. Louis. With extensive publications in areas such as epistemology, philosophy of religion, logic, and philosophy of language, he is also the administrator of the epistemology blog Certain Doubts, the editor of Oxford Studies in Philosophy of Religion, and the organizer of the Annual Philosophy of Religion Conference. His most recent books are Faith and Humility (Oxford University Press, 2018) and Rationality and Reflection (Oxford University Press, 2014). Contact: jkvanvig@wustl.edu.

Kevin McCain is Assistant Professor of Philosophy at the University of Alabama at Birmingham. His primary areas of research are epistemology and philosophy of science. He is the author of two books: Evidentialism and Epistemic Justification (Routledge, 2014) and The Nature of Scientific Knowledge (Springer, 2016). He is currently co-editing, with Ted Poston, Best Explanations: New Essays on Inference to the Best Explanation (Oxford University Press, forthcoming) and The Mystery of Skepticism: New Explorations (Brill, forthcoming). Contact: mccain@uab.edu.

Moti Mizrahi is an Assistant Professor of Philosophy at the Florida Institute of Technology. He has teaching and research interests in argumentation theory, epistemology, ethics, metaphysics, philosophy of religion, and philosophy of science. He has published or forthcoming papers in journals such as Argumentation, Axiomathes, European Journal for Philosophy of Religion, Informal Logic, International Journal for the Study of Skepticism, International Studies in Philosophy of Science, Journal for General Philosophy of Science, Metaphilosophy, Philosophia, Ratio, Review of Philosophy and Psychology, Social Epistemology, Teorema, and Think. Contact: motimizra@gmail.com.

Paul Noordhof is Anniversary Professor of Philosophy at the University of York. His main research interests are in the philosophy of mind, action theory, and metaphysics. His work in the philosophy of mind mainly focuses upon the nature and explanatory character of consciousness. His publications include “Believe What You Want” (Proceedings of the Aristotelian Society, 2001), “Self-Deception, Interpretation and Consciousness” (Philosophy and Phenomenological Research, 2003); “The Essential Instability of Self-Deception” (Social Theory and Practice, 2009); and “A Defence of Owens’ Exclusivity Objection to Beliefs Having Aims” (Philosophical Studies, 2013, with Ema Sullivan-Bissett). Contact: paul.noordhof@york.ac.uk.

Asbjørn Steglich-Petersen is Associate Professor in Philosophy at Aarhus University. He has published widely in epistemology, philosophy of mind, metaphysics, and philosophy of language, with a major strand of work devoted to epistemic normativity and the nature of belief. His articles have appeared in journals such as Mind, The Philosophical Quarterly, Synthese, Erkenntnis, Mind *and Language, Philosophical Studies, Journal of Semantics, British Journal of the Philosophy of Science, Utilitas, and in edited volumes published by Oxford and Cambridge University Press. He is also co-editor of the volume Reasons for Belief (Cambridge University Press, 2011). Contact: filasp@cas.au.dk.*

Logos & Episteme

Erna Sullivan-Bissett is a Lecturer in Philosophy at the University of Birmingham. Her research interests are in the philosophy of mind and psychology, specifically belief and its connection to truth, as well as self-deceptive beliefs and delusional beliefs. She is also interested in biological approaches to what are characteristically thought to be normative questions in philosophy of mind, epistemology, and ethics. Her publications include “A Defence of Owens’ Exclusivity Objection to Beliefs Having Aims’ (Philosophical Studies, 2013, with Paul Noordhof), “Aims and Exclusivity” (European Journal of Philosophy, forthcoming), “Biological Function and Epistemic Normativity” (Philosophical Explorations, forthcoming); and “Malfunction Defended” (Synthese, 2016). Contact: e.l.sullivan-bissett@bham.ac.uk.

Thomas Wilk is a PhD candidate in Philosophy at Johns Hopkins University and an adjunct instructor at various colleges and universities around Washington, DC. His research interests are primarily in metaethics, philosophy of language, epistemology, and applied ethics, but he also works on the philosophy of human rights, the history of early modern philosophy, and issues in the study of race, gender, and social justice. Contact: wilkth01@gmail.com.