

NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

Miloud Belkoniene is a PhD candidate at Fribourg University, Switzerland. His main areas of interest are epistemology, philosophy of mind, philosophy of science and philosophy of action. His current work focuses on the distinction that can be drawn between probabilistic credence and rational belief in relation to the features of evidence to which each of these states is sensitive and to their role in the analysis of rational decisions. Contact: miloud.belkoniene@unifr.ch.

John Biro teaches at the University of Florida. His interests are in the philosophy of language, the philosophy of mind, epistemology, metaphysics and the history of philosophy, especially in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. He has published papers in these areas in journals such as The Monist, Australasian Journal of Philosophy, Philosophy and Phenomenological Research, Philosophical Studies, History of Philosophy Quarterly, The Review of Metaphysics and Hume Studies. He is also co-editor of two collections of papers on Spinoza and one on Frege. Contact: jbiro@ufl.edu.

Fabio Lampert is a philosophy graduate student at the University of California, Davis. His main interests are in philosophical logic, logic, modality, epistemology, philosophy of language, and philosophy of religion. His publications include “Actuality and the A Priori” (Philosophical Studies, 2017) and “Actuality, Tableaux, and Two-Dimensional Modal Logics” (Erkenntnis, 2017). Contact: flampert@ucdavis.edu.

Andy Mueller is research assistant at J.W. Goethe University Frankfurt. He received his PhD from Goethe University in 2016 with a thesis on pragmatic encroachment and epistemic norms for practical reasoning. He is mainly interested in epistemology and in all things concerning reasons and rationality, both epistemic and practical. His paper “How Does Epistemic Rationality Constrain Practical Rationality?” and his co-authored paper “Knowledge Dethroned” (with Jacob Ross) are both forthcoming in Analytic Philosophy. Contact: andreas.mueller.uniffm@gmail.com.

Michael J. Shaffer is a professor of philosophy at St. Cloud State University. He has published numerous articles in the philosophy of science, logic and epistemology. He is the co-editor of What Place for the A Priori? (Chicago: Open Court, 2011) and author of Counterfactuals and Scientific Realism (Palgrave-MacMillan, 2012) and The Experimental Turn and the Methods of Philosophy (New York: Routledge, forthcoming). Contact: shaffermphil@hotmail.com.

Ioan Alexandru Tofan teaches Philosophy of Religion, Romanian Philosophy and Critical Theory at the "Alexandru Ioan Cuza" University of Iasi, Romania. He wrote books and articles on Hegel, Walter Benjamin, Michel de Certeau. He currently writes a book on the concept of spiritual experience in the works of Andre Scrima. Contact: atofanro@yahoo.com.

John N. Williams is an associate professor in philosophy in the School of Social Sciences at Singapore Management University. His research interests include paradoxes, epistemology and applied ethics. His most recent articles include: "There's Nothing to Beat a Backward Clock" (Logos & Episteme, 2016), "The Backward Clock, Truth-Tracking, and Safety" (with Neil Sinhababu, Journal of Philosophy, 2015), "Not Knowing You Know: A New Objection to the Defeasibility Theory of Knowledge" (Analysis, 2015), "Moore's Paradox in Speech: A Critical Survey" (Philosophy Compass, 2015), and "Moore's Paradox in Thought: A Critical Survey" (Philosophy Compass, 2015). Contact: johnwilliams@smu.edu.sg.