

NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

Philip Atkins is currently a Visiting Assistant Professor of Philosophy at Temple University. He received his doctorate in 2013 from the University of California, Santa Barbara. His research interests include the philosophy of language, epistemology, and metaphysics. Some of his recent publications include “Are Gettier Cases Misleading?” (Logos & Episteme, 2016), “A Russellian Account of Suspended Judgment” (Synthese, 2016) and “A Pragmatic Solution to Ostertag’s Puzzle” (Philosophical Studies, 2013). He is also the coauthor of “Essential Versus Accidental Properties” (Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy, with Teresa Robertson). Contact: philip.atkins@temple.edu.

Landon D. C. Elkind is a doctoral student at the University of Iowa. His areas of specialization are history of analytic philosophy, philosophy of logic, and formal ontology. His areas of concentration include ancient philosophy, philosophy of mathematics, modal logic, and metaphysics. His dissertation is a history and defense of logical atomism, and is appropriately titled In Defense of Logical Atomism. Contact: landon-elkind@uiowa.edu.

Mark Schroeder is Professor of Philosophy at the University of Southern California. He works widely on topics connected with epistemology, metaethics, normative ethics, and the philosophy of language, and is the author of Slaves of the Passions (Oxford University Press, 2007), Being For: Evaluating the Semantic Program of Expressivism (Oxford University Press, 2008), Noncognitivism in Ethics (Routledge, 2010), Explaining the Reasons We Share (Oxford University Press, 2014), and Expressing Our Attitudes (Oxford University Press, 2015). He is currently at work on a book, Reasons First, exploring, inter alia, how non-evidential facts, including pragmatic and moral factors, can affect what we know and what it is epistemically rational to believe. Contact: maschroe@usc.edu.

Michael J. Shaffer is professor of philosophy at St. Cloud State University. His main areas of research interest are in epistemology, logic and the philosophy of science, and he has published many articles on various topics in these areas. He is co-editor of What Place for the A Priori? (Open Court, 2011) and is the author of Counterfactuals and Scientific Realism (Palgrave-MacMillan, 2012), Quasi-factive
