

NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

Adam Michael Bricker is a postdoctoral researcher at the University of Oulu. He completed his PhD at the University of Edinburgh in 2018 with a thesis arguing against the factivity of knowledge. His research efforts are presently split between the application of epistemology to the philosophy of historiography and the application of electrophysiological methods to epistemology. His present empirical research is conducted in the EEG lab at the University of Turku, in conjunction with the Turku Brain and Mind Centre. He has also published on the philosophy of risk. Contact: Adam.Michael.Bricker@gmail.com.

James Cargile retired in Spring 2018 after 53 years on the faculty of the Corcoran Department of Philosophy at the University of Virginia. Contact: jc7y@virginia.edu.

David Coss is currently an Instructor of Philosophy at Indiana University Kokomo. His primary research interests lie in Epistemology, with an emphasis on Contextualism and Pragmatic Encroachment, as well as issues in social epistemology (esp. epistemic injustice). His recent papers include “Contextualism and Context Internalism” published in this journal as well as “Interest-Relative Invariantism and Indifference Problems” published in Acta Analytica. He is currently co-authoring a paper on the relationship between practical interests and theories well-being as it relates to pragmatic encroachment. He may be reached at davidcossphilosopher@gmail.com.

Gábor Forrai obtained his PhD at the University of Notre Dame and is currently Professor at the Institute of Business Economics of Eötvös Loránd University, Budapest. He has published on epistemology, philosophy of language, philosophy of mind and philosophy of science. His works include Reference, Truth and Conceptual Schemes (Kluwer, 2001) and Intentionality: Past and Future (coedited with George Kampis, Rodopi, 2005). Contact: forrai@gti.elte.hu.

Christos Kyriacou is a Lecturer at the University of Cyprus. His main research interests lie in epistemology, metaethics and their intersection. He has published in Synthese, Erkenntnis, Episteme, Philosophical Psychology, Journal of Ethics and Social Philosophy and elsewhere and in volumes by Oxford University Press and DeGruyter. He has also edited the volume Metaepistemology (2018, Palgrave) with Robin McKenna and currently preparing Skeptical Invariantism Reconsidered for Routledge (with Kevin Wallbridge). Contact: ckiriakou@gmail.com.

Daniella Meehan is a PhD student in the subject of Philosophy at the University of Glasgow and a member of the university's epistemology research centre, 'COGITO.' Her primary research lies in the intersection between epistemology and ethics, specifically vice epistemology and epistemic responsibility. She is particularly interested in the analysis of intellectual vices such as ignorance, close-mindedness and epistemic injustice, and what it takes for people who possess these to be blameworthy. Her aim is to form a novel account of intellectual vices which has blameworthiness as a constitute and central feature, where blameworthiness is understood as a distinct form of epistemic blame. Contact: d.meehan.1@gla.ac.uk.

Moti Mizrahi is Associate Professor of Philosophy in the School of Arts and Communication at the Florida Institute of Technology. He is also an Associate and Book Reviews Editor of Philosophia and the editor of The Kuhnian Image of Science: Time for a Decisive Transformation? (Rowman & Littlefield, 2018). He has teaching and research interests in argumentation, epistemology, ethics, logic, philosophy of religion, and philosophy of science. He has published extensively on the philosophy of science, the scientific realism/anti-realism debate, the epistemology of philosophy, and argumentation. His work has appeared in journals such as Argumentation, Erkenntnis, Philosophical Studies, Studies in History and Philosophy of Science, and Synthese. Contact: motimizra@gmail.com.

Giovanni Rolla is an associate professor at Federal University of Bahia (Brazil) and a permanent member of the Graduate Program of Philosophy at the Federal University of Piau  (Brazil). His works deal with philosophy of cognition, focusing on embodiment and enactivism, and with traditional epistemology, including analysis of knowledge, know-how, normativity and skepticism. He is also secretly an experimentalist musician and loves cats. Contact: rollagiovanni@gmail.com.

Michael J. Shaffer is currently professor of philosophy at St. Cloud State University. He is also a fellow of the center for formal epistemology at Carnegie-Mellon University, a fellow of the Rotman Institute for Science and Values at the University of Western Ontario, a Lakatos fellow at the London School of Economics, a fellow of the University of Cologne's summer institute for epistemology and an NEH fellow at the University of Utah. His main areas of research interest are in epistemology, logic and the philosophy of science, and he has published nearly fifty articles on various topics in these areas. He is co-editor of What Place for the A Priori? (Open Court, 2011) and is the author of Counterfactuals and Scientific Realism (Palgrave-MacMillan, 2012), Quasi-factive Belief and Knowledge-like States (Lexington, forthcoming) and The Experimental Turn and the Methods of Philosophy (Routledge, forthcoming). He is also currently working on a co-authored book criticizing alternative medicine. Contact: shaffermphil@hotmail.com.