

NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

Simon Dierig is a Lecturer of Philosophy and a “Privatdozent” at Heidelberg University. He received his PhD from the LMU Munich and his “Habilitation” from the University of Heidelberg. He works mainly in epistemology, the philosophy of mind, action theory and the history of philosophy. He has published on Descartes’ philosophy of mind, Berkeley’s metaphysics, Moore’s paradox and self-knowledge, the compatibility of semantic externalism and a priori self-knowledge, the individuation of actions and the role of the principle of charity in interpretation. His recent papers include “Moore’s Beweis, Wahrnehmung und Skeptizismus” (Grazer Philosophische Studien 94, 2017), “Descartes’ Sum-Res-Cogitans-Argument in der Zweiten Meditation” (forthcoming in Archiv für Geschichte der Philosophie) and “Falsifikationismus ohne Festsetzungen” (forthcoming in Zeitschrift für philosophische Forschung). Contact: simon\_dierig@yahoo.de.

Claire Field is a Postdoctoral Research Fellow at the University of Stirling on the AHRC-funded project Varieties of Risk, and an Associate Research Fellow on the European Research Council-funded project Roots of Responsibility. Her research interests concern irrationality, blame, and recklessness in ethics and epistemology. She recently completed her PhD at the University of St Andrews. Website: claire-field.com. Contact: claire.a.field@gmail.com.

Eric Gilbertson is a Senior Lecturer in Philosophy at Texas State University. His current research interests include bioethics, philosophy of sport, and the epistemology of theistic belief. Contact: eng18@txstate.edu.

Noah Gordon is currently studying for the PhD at the University of Southern California. His main interests lie in metaphysics, philosophy of action, and philosophy of religion. He also has published other recent work in epistemology: “What Does It Take to Know that You Know?” (Acta Analytica, forthcoming). Contact: noahgord@usc.edu.

Ron Wilburn received his B.A. in philosophy from the University of California, Los Angeles, and his Ph.D. in philosophy from the University of Pennsylvania. Now retired from the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, he has published numerous papers, mainly concerning epistemological and realist issues, with an emphasis on skepticism. Contact: wilburn.ron@gmail.com.

Benjamin Winokur received his PhD in philosophy from York University (Toronto) in 2021. His research is primarily focused on questions relating to self knowledge: whether, how, and how often we can know our own current mental states. He is also interested in what roles self-knowledge plays in our psychological economies, and in what entitles other people to trust what we say about our current states of mind. Finally, he has wider interests in social epistemology, digital epistemology, philosophy of mind, metaethics, and philosophy of language. Contact: ben.i.winokur@gmail.com.