

NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

Fred Adams received his Ph.D. from Wisconsin. He is currently Emeritus Professor in departments of Philosophy and in Linguistics & Cognitive Science at the University of Delaware. He has 140 publications in various areas of philosophy and cognitive science. Contact: fa@udel.edu.

Eric Bayruns García is an assistant professor in McMaster University's department of philosophy. And he is a research associate in the African Centre for Epistemology and Philosophy of Science at the University of Johannesburg. He was a fellow-in-residence at the Edmond & Lily Safra Center for Ethics at Harvard University. And he was an assistant professor in California State University, San Bernardino's philosophy department. He specializes in philosophy of race, epistemology and Latin American philosophy. His research focuses on epistemological and ethical issues raised by racial injustice and colonialism. His work has been published in peer-reviewed academic philosophy journals such as Episteme, Social Epistemology, Critical Philosophy of Race, Feminist Philosophy Quarterly and the Journal of Social Philosophy. Contact: eric.bayruns@gmail.com.

Murray Clarke received his Ph.D. from Western University. He is currently Professor of Philosophy at Concordia University in Montreal. He publishes on issues in contemporary epistemology and cognitive science. His book, Reconstructing Reason and Representation was published by the MIT Press. He has numerous publications, including papers in the Australasian Journal of Philosophy, Philosophical Studies, Philosophy of Science and Synthese. Contact: murray.clarke@concordia.ca.

Elliott R. Crozat teaches philosophy and the humanities at Purdue University Global (USA). His areas of research include epistemology, philosophy of religion, axiology, and moral philosophy. He has published on the meaning of life, the nature of propositional knowledge, and the problem of evil. Contact: ecrozat@purdueglobal.edu.

Seyyed Mohsen Eslami is currently an assistant professor at the Department of Philosophy, Tarbiat Modares University, Tehran. He has also been a resident researcher at the School of Analytic Philosophy, Institute for Research in Fundamental Sciences (IPM), Tehran. His primary areas of research include normativity, ethical theory, applied philosophy, and the problem of evil. His work has been published in, among others, Philosophical Quarterly, Philosophical

Logos & Episteme

Explorations, International Journal of Philosophical Studies, and Res Publica.
Contact: s.eslami@modares.ac.ir.

Xuanzi Fang is a PhD student at School of Philosophy, Renmin University of China, and a visiting doctoral researcher at COGITO, Epistemology Research Centre, University of Glasgow. Her main research interests are in epistemology and philosophy of mind. Contact: xuanzifang@gmail.com.

Dominik Jarczewski is a Research Assistant of Philosophy at Jagiellonian University in Kraków (Poland), and an affiliate member of COGITO Epistemology Research Centre in Glasgow. He received his PhD in 2019 at the University of Paris 1 Panthéon-Sorbonne. His main research interests are virtue and social epistemology, pragmatism, and the history of contemporary philosophy. In 2022, he was awarded Kosciuszko Foundation Fellowship, and a 3-year National Science Centre (NCN) grant for two projects in virtue and social epistemology. He is regent of studies for the Polish Province of Dominicans that is responsible for research institutes and study programmes and strategies of Polish Dominicans. Contact: dominik.jarczewski@uj.edu.pl.

Mark Maller was Assistant Professor in philosophy at Lewis University, taught at College of DuPage (and others) and is presently retired. His Ph.D. is from Duquesne University and M.L.S., University of Pittsburgh. Influenced from existential phenomenology, he concentrates in analytic philosophy. Interests include philosophy of religion, metaphysics, modern philosophy, scientific empiricism and practical ethics. His work is found on ResearchGate and Philpapers. Contact: mpmphilosophy@gmail.com.