

NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

Miguel López Astorga has a Ph.D. in Logic and Philosophy of Science from the University of Cádiz (Spain). He carried out post-doctoral research on human reasoning, on the mental model theory, and on the logical forms of propositions, under the supervision of Professor Philip Johnson-Laird. Although he has worked in several institutions, at present, he is Full Professor and Researcher at the Institute of Humanistic Studies, Research Center on Cognitive Sciences, University of Talca (Chile). His last researches focus on the human inferential activity. He is especially interested in the relations that can be found between syntax, semantics, and pragmatics in that activity. He also addresses the possible cognitive potential of some ancient logics, particularly, Stoic logic. ORCID ID: <https://orcid.org/0000-0002-6004-0587>. Contact: milopez@utalca.cl.

Bálint Békefi is a graduate student in Philosophy at Central European University and an Associate Lecturer at Pentecostal Theological College, Budapest. His main areas of research are epistemology and the philosophy of religion. Contact: balint.bekefi@gmail.com.

Jeremy Fantl is Professor of Philosophy at the University of Calgary. He is the author of The Limitations of the Open Mind and, with Matthew McGrath, Knowledge in an Uncertain World. He works primarily in epistemology. Contact: jfantl@ucalgary.ca.

Ali Hossein Khani is Researcher at University of Religions and Denominations (Tehran) and Assistant Professor at Iranian Institute of Philosophy (Tehran). His publications have been mainly on Quine, Davidson, Wittgenstein and Wright. He is the author of the monograph on Kripke, Kripke's Wittgenstein: Meaning, Rules, and Scepticism (Anthem Press, forthcoming), and the co-editor, with Gary N. Kemp, of two volumes on Wittgenstein, Wittgenstein and Other Philosophers, Volume I and II (Routledge, forthcoming) as well as a collected volume on naturalism, Naturalism and Its Challenges (Routledge, forthcoming). ORCID: <https://orcid.org/0000-0002-0537-3805>. Contact: hosseinkhani@irip.ac.ir.

Jimmy Alfonso Licon is an Assistant Teaching Professor of Philosophy at Arizona State University. He received his Ph.D. in philosophy from the University of Maryland, College Park. His research specializes in ethical and epistemic aspects of cooperation, signaling, and ignorance, and the role of aspirations and evidence in philosophy of religion and philosophy of law. Contact: jimmy.licon@asu.edu.

Logos & Episteme

Matthew McGrath, Professor of Philosophy at Washington University in St. Louis, is the author, with Jeremy Fantl, of Knowledge in an Uncertain World as well as a number of papers in epistemology and metaphysics. Contact: matthew.m@wustl.edu.

Daniel Rönndal is a Swedish philosopher, logician and researcher affiliated with Stockholm University. He has published papers on modal logic, doxastic logic, deontic logic, temporal logic, counterfactual logic, various paradoxes and aporias (such as the contrary-to-duty paradoxes), the golden rule and several other topics. Contact: daniel.ronnedal@philosophy.su.se.

Howard Sankey is Professor of Philosophy in the School of Historical and Philosophical Studies at the University of Melbourne (Australia). He teaches in epistemology and philosophy of science. He has published on the problem of incommensurability, epistemic relativism and scientific realism. He is the author of Scientific Realism and the Rationality of Science (Ashgate, 2008), Theories of Scientific Method: An Introduction (Acumen, 2007, with Robert Nola), Rationality, Relativism and Incommensurability (Ashgate, 1997) and The Incommensurability Thesis (Avebury, 1994). More information may be found at <https://philpeople.org/profiles/howard-sankey>. Contact: chs@unimelb.edu.au.